Software does miraculous things these days, whereby through a software, one can create a beautiful symphony with a few simple click of a button. Just recently, my best pal bought a software called Symphobia, whereby the respective software lets the user to create an orchestra which I find to be simply mind-blowing. In fact, Symphobia comes with a whopping 33GB of sample pool sounds that one can use, and with a few simple stroke of a button, one can create a masterpiece.
